Flowery Banks

Dear Va. scribs: It is not because we were all asleep that you did not hear anything from us, but it was because we were all so busy.

We cannot play Robinson Crusoe, and if you were here, you would not think the flowers had ceased to bloom. There are plenty of them yet, and about those water melons, you eat all you can hold.

But don't put yourself in misery eating them for me, as there are wagon loads of them here at Logan, and plenty near home, and I would not take two steps out of my way for water melon. Yet there are members of my family that eat them. But hold your breath when it comes to the musk-melon.

I was at Starr last week, and the children and I had a good time eating the musk-melons for Mother Cruise. We were there from Saturday until last Friday and had plenty of time, so you must go ahead with W. M. for yourself.

This is a short letter, but I have work stacked as high as my head, and haven't time for any more this time, yet you need not discard us. Because we are absent.
